Web site improvements

21 October 2005

Starting later this month you will start to see changes to the look and content on the web site. The changes will aid navigation and usability, improve presentational aspects and generally provide a better focus on delivery of warnings and basic weather forecasts direct to you from the Met Office. There will be a series of changes, that by Summer 2006, will provide information aimed at helping the public in their daily activities, particularly during severe weather.
